

Industrial Infill Lynn, Massachusetts

Woodburn & Company assisted in the development and creation of a conceptual site plan for a large property in the center of Lynn. The parcel, previously occupied by General Electric, is currently an open asphalt parking area with associated environmental problems. The parcel required sensitivity and recognition of the context of the surrounding residential area. Slated for industrial uses, the resulting plan envisioned buildings that had an office park look on the street side while allowing the industrial functions within contained or buffered courtyards.
